Tomato Tea - For Me!

Surrey blogger Natalia Wolski shares with us her fine dining experience at Steve Drake's Michelin star restaurant Sorell, Dorking.

Written by Natalia. Follow @shedreamsofgucci

Sorell restaurant in Dorking, opened in 2018, by the uber-talented Steven Drake, formerly of Drakes in Ripley and holder of a coveted Michelin star there for 14 years, wasted no time with Sorell, gaining a Michelin star here too within a year. We were lucky enough last month to sample.

An absolute corker of a 9-course tasting menu, with perfect wine accompaniments from the delightful sommelier Valentin and thoughtful and detailed insights by our engaging but unobtrusive waitress.

Sorell has quickly become a culinary destination and with good reason, every dish was exceptional. Spectacularly presented, complex, intense and utterly inspired, each plate is varied and well balanced, upping the ante with every course before reaching a crescendo around course 7! Special mention must go to the tomato tea though possibly the greatest surprise and a time consuming and painstaking process behind it. Don't be fooled by the minimal presentation, it's like walking into a greenhouse full of ripe tomatoes in a taste explosion!

Steve Drake has created a menu that truly surprises, with some inspiring combinations, fairness. If you're a foodie, it's an absolute must. With locally sourced ingredients and even wine (they use the local wine merchant in Dorking wherever possible and have a variety of locally produced wines), it really is no surprise that this 40-seat restaurant has people crossing the country and queuing up to sample Drake's innovative and adventurous creations.
